Kobe Steel Announces Earnings Forecast for Fiscal 2006 (ending March 2007) and Interim Dividend

TOKYO, September 7, 2006 — Kobe Steel, Ltd. announced today its forecast for interim and full-year operating results for fiscal 2006, ending March 31, 2007.

1. Consolidated Forecast

Japan's economy has been gradually growing in the first half of fiscal 2006. With corporate earnings at high levels, private-sector capital investment has been increasing and personal spending has been going up, spurred by higher workers' incomes. Overseas, inflationary pressure remains strong due to high oil prices, but in general the world economy continues on an expansionary trend.

In Kobe Steel's Iron & Steel segment, demand continues to be strong in the automotive, shipbuilding and other domestic manufacturing industries. Overseas, the supply and demand situation is also improving mainly for steel sheet products. The supply and demand environment on the whole has become tighter, as domestic inventories have been going down to more appropriate levels.

Under these conditions, although the prices of iron ore and some raw materials have risen, the supply and demand situation has enabled Kobe Steel to increase the sales prices of steel products. Accordingly, operating results in the Iron & Steel segment are anticipated to be roughly the same as the previous forecast on April 27, 2006. However, in the Aluminum and Copper segment on the back of high raw material prices, inventory valuation under the average method is expected to push up half-year profits. In addition, operating results in the Machinery segment and the Construction Machinery segment are anticipated to increase, in comparison to the previous forecast. In the Machinery segment, orders have been strong in the petrochemical and energy fields. In the Construction Machinery segment, demand for excavators has been high in China.

As a result, consolidated sales in the first half of fiscal 2006 are anticipated to increase 50 billion yen, in comparison to the previous forecast, to 900 billion yen. Pretax ordinary income is forecast to rise 15 billion yen, to 80 billion yen. Net income is expected to increase 5 billion yen, to 45 billion yen.

In the second half of fiscal 2006, the economy is anticipated to continue expanding. Although rising oil prices is a concern, domestic capital investment and personal spending are expected to continue being strong.

Under these conditions, in the second half of fiscal 2006 operating results in the Iron & Steel segment are anticipated to generally be in line with the previous forecast. Although raw material prices are forecast to be higher than previously estimated, the sales prices of steel products are anticipated to increase. Other segments are also expected to progress as planned.

As a result, consolidated sales for the full year are anticipated to increase 70 billion yen, to 1,820 billion yen. Pretax ordinary income is expected to rise 15 billion yen, to 160 billion yen. Net income is forecast to increase 5 billion yen, to 90 billion yen.
